

I would prefer that the FCC worry about the fact that there is too little integrity in broadcasting, rather than the "Illegal" recording and rewatching of broadcast programs when it includes commercials. There has to be some way to make only the commercials irrecordable rather than the television program. Otherwise what then is the point of a VCR or any other Video Recording device. In any case if this does go through then they should at least release the shows in some manner so that people can watch them over again if they want to.
